A series of online comments, written in Arabic and in Chaldean and Syriac, which are less formal than that usually found in the Scripture, constitute the entire collection, but there is no reason to suppose that they were not composed by one author. Pachinko, the Play-Catching Machine, is a 2015 multimedia project by Aphex Twin (Richard D. James) about a pachinko machine that is programmed to play the piano. The full project consists of over 1000 individual media assets, about 70 individual sketches, and over 300 audio pieces. However, the official site states that the entire project consists of 23,844 sound bytes (partly the product of automatic counting software). Upon closing a donation box on the official site, all proceeds go to Child's Play, a charity that gives toys to children in hospitals.
