And finally here's the download link for all the files- Once again sorry for the inconvenience. A: We use AutoHotkey (to quickly enable subtitles. Basically, you have to name your file.ahk (for example, subtitle.ahk) and use this script:

#Left $S2 = %subtitle% $S2 :=
Subtitle Subtitle := $S2 $S2 := $S2
::OnLevelButton:: $S2 := Subtitle MsgBox %subtitle% ; show the subtitle $S2 := $S2 ; restore to default value

On our project, here's how I create the sub-files: "Visual Studio Command Prompt" opens, where I run my command

"perldl.exe" "+C:\Program Files\AutoHotkey\AutoHotkey.ahk" This opens a new window for the script. You can paste the whole thing (except the title "Subtitle") to prevent copying and pasting. (I use AutoHotkey for other purposes and want to easily edit any configuration file). I prefer this method to the command prompt because it's no more likely to be blocked by the "Run as" tab of the "Start menu" of the Windows. If I use the hotkey command "I select "Run as..."
"Runwith" when the hotkey is pressed, it can't be used for another script (even if I've created it with a different name) unless I run the command again. If I select "Run with other user account" in the "Start menu" for the first script, a dialog pops up and I can name my script with "Subtitle" and run the script with the main user. I can't find a name for the script that's not in "Run with." I use "Program Files" instead of "Program Files (x86)" as a general rule. Also, if you don
