Ted Cruz sparred Tuesday in the latest debate over the future of ObamaCare, the latest instance of their campaign to try to undermine the main pillar of President Barack Obama's legacy. Cruz, a Texas senator and evangelical Christian, charged Trump and Democratic rival Hillary Clinton are trying to destroy the health care system. Trump, a businessman and former reality TV star, said Cruz is a liar and Cruz is putting out "extremely dishonest things." "This was a much different Ted than I have ever seen before," Trump said. "And this is not going to be the same Ted that we have seen for too long." Both Cruz and Trump tried to shift the focus to Clinton, instead of on the open insurance market for the first time in years that has been in place since 2014. Trump suggested the next president needs to read the 30-page bill that will appear in the open enrollment period and determine if it is really affordable. Cruz, meanwhile, suggested Trump would "destroy" the health insurance program if he's elected president. "If we elect Donald Trump, the insurance that people have purchased through the exchanges is going to go up in smoke," Cruz said. "There will be no more exchange that sells single-payer government health care." Trump and Cruz, who have strong evangelical support, exchanged jabs on abortion and social issues, including whether Cruz supports abortion in cases of rape and incest. Former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton and former Maryland Gov. Martin O'Malley, the Democrats, also spent much of the evening on topics such as the economy, terrorism and 6d1f23a050
